ADVERTISING

Has created many a new business;
Has enlarged many an old business;
Has revived many a dull business;
Has created many a last business;
Has saved many a failing business;
Has preserved many a large business;
And insures success in any business.

GIRARD'S SECRET.—Stephen Girard used to say in his old age: "I have always considered advertising literally and long to be the great medium of success in business, and the prelude to wealth. And I have made an invariable rule to advertise in dull times as well as in busiest, long experience having taught me that money thus spent is well laid out, by continually keeping my business before the public. It has secured many sales that I otherwise would have lost."

ADVERTISE YOUR BUSINESS.

KEEP YOUR NAME BEFORE THE PUBLIC.

JUDICIOUS ADVERTISING INSURES A FORTUNE.

FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITOL.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5, 1873.

There is nothing newly developed in Credit Mobilier. That subject has become an exhausted theme that it is stale. The nine days of wonder has expired, and the victims are commencing to recuperate. Kansas matters have come to the front, and when we think of Pomeroy we cease to say, "What a fall was there!" because the old gentleman lit on a railway train and has rushed back Washington, exclaiming "conspiracy" all the way. When a man can retire from the Senate, and quit public life with private virtues in possession valued at two and a half millions of dollars, he can afford to ignore even the scorching rays of this sun of York. Senator Caldwell comes out this morning with specific denials of charges in evidence against him, and if we are to accept his statements, he is the victim of a conspiracy that is abominable. Put matters the best way we can, the political game in Kansas is beset with "ways that are dark and tricks that vain," such that set the heathen Chinee far back in the shade.

Louisiana throws all other doings into obscurity, however, in shoving in evidence noted for moral obliquity. An old fellow, named Jacques, entered the ring—or rather the Committee room—the other day, and said his say fluently and voluminously, confessing that he had committed all sorts of felony, and perjury, and forgery, and knew all the while that it was criminal to do so in other States, but didn't suppose there was any wrong to do it in Louisiana—thought anything was fair in politics. So he manufactured false affidavits by the thousand to overturn an election, and overturned it. It appeared that he had quarrelled with his old friends, and was now giving evidence against them. The Committee ruled his evidence out as unreliable.

This man Stewart, who is being confined in the "Bastile" of the Capitol—as a look-up room in the basement is denominated—has fulminated a proclamation as pompous and ridiculous as can be. He is, undoubtedly, especially proud of his present conspicuous consequence, and makes the most of it. The man is a sort of lobbyist, one of that species whose furniture is all the time being levied on because it hasn't been paid for, and whose position in society is uncertain as can be. He seems to have had a faculty of being useful to approach some men and affect some things, and of more consequence to those who have axes to grind than in any regular business. His letter in last evening's Star is about the most egregious thing that has appeared, and the only conclusion to arrive at is that the man has finally found his appropriate sphere.

THE MODOC QUESTION.

Mr. Meacham starts immediately for Oregon with the instructions of the Secretary of the Interior as to the conduct of the peace negotiations with the Modocs. At his request the members of the Commission will not be as was first talked of, but will consist of himself as Chairman, with Hon. Jesse Applegate and Samuel Case, Esq., Agent at Alsea, who is a man well versed in Indian character. It is hoped that the Modocs can be entirely removed to some other region. This may be considered a critical test of the peace policy. The original peace Commission of the Indian Department was anxious for peace efforts to be made. I wrote you before of the part taken by the Oregonians now here to favor it, and while they are conscious that proposals for peace will be opposed by the military and by many citizens, and all that, it is the down right intention of the Government to try its efficacy and act fairly by the Indians as well as protect human life and the property of settlers, and save war expenses to the nation. The matter is viewed as very important here, and if the Commissioners can effect a reasonable settlement of the difficulty, it will be much to their credit.

VIENNA EXPOSITION.

Congress has provided liberally for the exhibition of American products and manufactures at the great International Exhibition, to be held this spring at Vienna, and there will undoubtedly be a general attendance of Americans who are able to undergo the expense. Excursions are already being planned in steamships that will visit many foreign ports and make the cruise one of varied interest. The probabilities are that many Innocents will improve the opportunity to go abroad. We have an exposition of our own coming off in the Centennial year, 1876, and we wish to treat our friends of the ancient dynasties with consideration, in hopes that they will cross the water to see our show three years hence. We propose to make a raid on their small change, and also to show them how much Brother Jonathan has accomplished in only 100 years, while their nations have been plodding along ever since the flood doing what they have done, and frequently doing it over again.

INCREASE OF SALARIES.

There are a parcel of fellows in the Department employed at the same salaries paid in 1812, and a good many of them look as if they were the identical ones who drew them then. Great complaint is made that everything else has raised in price, and they think salaries should go up to correspond. This is an interesting question which Congress is always too busy to attend to. They—the Congressmen—have this advantage: they are up on Capitol Hill and the Departments are scattered about from three-fourths of a mile to two miles off, and the business hours keep the clerks away from them, and they are not obliged to notice their importunity, which is confined to eloquent petitions and memorial and newspaper appeals. The clerks, policemen, etc., in fact everybody else that has employment at the Capitol, are paid about half as much again as the same class elsewhere, but they were close at hand and couldn't be put off; distance lends enchantment to all the rest and their salaries appear big enough to Congress in the vista produced by the length of the avenue. In 1866 the two Houses snatched time enough from the situation to elevate their own salaries from $3,000 to $5,000 per annum; but that was a case of presence of mind in extreme danger. They may possibly find time to send them up this winter to $7,000, but that will be the most they can be expected to accomplish in one session, and they do this merely to experiment on the temper of the people. They try the physic on themselves first and if they find the people will stand it they may do something for the clerks. There is an experiment in this to discover how little will support a family—a clerk's family. If they live, all right; but if they die, then they will consider the propriety of raising their salaries. Justice will be done, but at present she goes it blind.

PACIFIC COAST COMMERCE.

The bill providing a subsidy for steamers in the trade between San Francisco and Australia was tabled in the Senate by a majority of two. This Congress is watching American commerce to see if it will revive. It is in favor of a speedy revival of an ocean trade and earnestly wants America to relieve Britannia of her honored duty of ruling the wave. We are younger, and not being mean about trifles, would spell the old lady awhile. I believe the question as to this subsidy was if this was the identical wave that Britannia was a ruling, and when it was found that most of it wasn't, the Australian subsidy bill went on the table. I will give justice where it is due and say that a splendid effort in favor of the bill was made by Morrill of Maine. The bill certainly had peculiar merits. It was important to us, also, because Chinook salmon is becoming a favorite article of diet at the other end of that line.

EXAMINATION OF RAILROADS.

It is the intention of anti-corruptionists to pass a bill which will provide for the examination into the affairs of railroads generally and ascertain sufficient facts to form a basis of future Congressional action. The statistics show the existence of over 68,000 miles of railroad at the end of last year, of which over 7,000 were constructed within the year. The commission to be created will have to ascertain the actual cost of construction of each road, what its stock represents now, and what its income and profits amount to. This will reveal an interesting fact that while water on the brain is fatal to humanity generally, it is a successful element in the brain of railroad directors. They get water on the brain to such an extent that the stock becomes a very vapor.

TELEGRAPH TO CHINA.

There is talk of chartering a telegraph across the ocean from our side to Asia. The modest projectors only want permission to go ahead, when they will immodestly "ship their cable"—to use a nautical phrase—over to China. The only wonderful fact about this is that the inventors ask no subsidy. They want leave—and then they'll leave. I am afraid, as this cable doesn't start from Boston, they won't be willing to give the required permission, but if they do the least reward they can give the modest claimants will be to vote them a land grant. I would suggest the alternate odd sections for twenty miles each side and if the Sandwich Islands get within that distance let it be at their peril. They needn't be afraid of corruption in this cable stock, for it never will need watering, and there can be no swindling by agents along the line.

OREGON.

There are 116 school children in LaGrande.

A Yamhillian is manufacturing a cultivator of his own invention.

Albany's big hog weighed 559 pounds dressed, according to the Democrat.

A lynx four feet and a half long was caught in Union county a few days ago.

The steamer Carrie is hauled out on the bank below Oregon City undergoing repairs.

The printing of the laws passed at last session of the Legislature, is about all finished.

The bridge on Pudding river, at Parkersville, Marion county, is reported impassable.

Two prisoners at the penitentiary cut, split and piled up nine cords of wood in one day the past week.

The Odd Fellows are now preparing a hall in Union, Union county, in which to organize and establish a lodge.

The Summerville and Walla Walla wagon road company is now making preparations to build the road the coming season.

The farmers at Buena Vista held a meeting last Saturday to consider the proposition of the expected new line of steamers.

The "heathen Chinee" is making rapid strides toward civilization. One of the "Johns" at Lafayette whipped his wife the other day.

From the Albany Register: "The office of the Western Union Telegraph Company at Corvallis, was permanently closed on Monday last. We suppose the wire will be taken down."

Oregon is estimated to contain about 61,000,000 acres of land, of which the Government had surveyed, up to June 30, 1872, only 16,140,281 acres, or a little over one-sixth of the entire area.

The Reporter man threatens to print the names of young ladies who pass his office Sunday evenings ha-ha-ing, tee hee-ing and giggling, unless they quit. We'll bet the editor of the Reporter is envious.

The Mountain Sentinel says cattle in some parts of Union county are getting quite thin in consequence of the extreme length of winter, and that they will need no more snow there before July or August.

The Farmers' Club at Peoria, Linn county, met on the 15th and elected S. D. Haley, D. C. Curry and T. L. Porter, as delegates to attend the Farmers' Convention to be held at Albany, March 8th.

Letters received from people in the Eastern States by citizens of Linn county, state that large numbers will start for Oregon in the spring, the severity of the winters there having become longer unbearable.

A gentleman writes from Harrisburg to Sheriff Parker, of Linn county, stating that Elias Kenney, who killed Pelton, is near Brownsville, and would surrender himself up to the officers at the March term of the Circuit Court, as he is confident of an acquittal.

A Union county farmer says there is one lesson our farmers should learn,—when their store houses are filled to overflowing with wheat, oats and barley, not to sigh for that condition of things which can only result from their having depleted granaries and nothing to sell.

The Register says: "The anxiety of Jack's band of amiable Modocs for peace is distressing. It becomes so painful to them, that while all is quiet on the Lava beds, they relieve themselves by stealing to some settler's house and burning it. Their savage breasts are 'burning' to be soothed."

The following are the entries of land made at U. S. Land Office at La Grande from December 10th, 1867, to February 1st, 1873: Homestead entries, 82,412 acres; final proof homesteads, 9,630; entered with A. C. S. 14,560; sold for cash, 24,107; pre-emption filings, 100,800. Total, 228,500.

The Mercury of the 21st says: "There was received at the Executive office yesterday a large number of maps and plats of United States surveys, showing the swamp lands embraced therein, forwarded by the Secretary of the Interior to the Governor for the purpose of segregation and patenting to the State."

From the Enterprise we learn that the population of Oregon City is 956, classified: Number of males between 4 and 20, 170; number of females between 4 and 20, 180; number of males under 4, 68; number of females under 4, 66; number of females over 20, 196; number of voters 242; number of Chinamen, 31; number of Indians, 11; number of Kanakas, 2.

A. J. Cochran writes the Democrat from Willow Creek, Umatilla county, that they have had an unusual winter in that section. It has snowed and rained a great deal, having been in all about four feet of snow. It passed off, however, in a very short time. They will have excellent grass and crops this season. Cattle buyers are invited to come into that part of the country to buy, as there are a surplus of cattle there.

The Sentinel says: "We fear another Indian scare is about to transpire, and we hope without any foundation whatever. It is known to our readers that a band of the Nez Perces tribe of Indians, of which the sons of the deceased Chief Joseph claim to be head, have from the first objected to the settlement of the Wallowas on the ground that the title of those Indians (whom we designate as Wallowas) had not been extinguished."

The Yamhill Reporter says the steamer Calliope was on her way to McMinnville on Sunday evening, and arriving at St. Joseph bridge her way was obstructed and she was detained until next day about 9 A. M. What for? Why, because. The Steamer Dayton was behind, and some people might be so unkind as to attribute the cause of this refusal to pass the Calliope to the idea that the bridge owners might overstep justice in order to favor their own boat. We leave our readers to conclude.

The Courier says: The examination of Coxen, charged with the murder of Hasbrook, was concluded on Saturday last, and the accused held to await the action of the grand jury. He is now lodged in jail. This case is, in some respects, a very remarkable one, and if Coxen is not guilty he is certainly the victim of a train of singularly unfortunate circumstances. There are sundry considerations which oppose the theory that the murder was committed as was first reported by persons seeking to steal grain from the barn. The early hour in the evening when they put in their appearance is difficult to be accounted for, since the most foolhardy thief seldom goes forth at 7 o'clock, and while the house of the intended victim is yet lighted up. And then Hasbrook was shot in the back, a circumstance which leads to the conviction that he must have been deliberately assassinated. Something may transpire between now and the next term of the Circuit Court to lift the veil of mystery and uncertainty which now enshrouds the case.

Gen. M. V. Brown, of the Albany Democrat, is in more danger from the unmarried ladies of his town that he ever was from the Modocs. And for why? Because he published the following: "Chicago capitalists have bought 3,000 acres of land in Jackson county, Wisconsin, to be converted into a cranberry marsh. If they have a few old bachelors who will come out here and marry a few Albany spinsters, they can have cranberry marshes by first paying for the license and preacher's blessing. Fact! We've seen the marshes on the spinsters' faces every time they have seen a wedding notice."

The Albany Democrat says: "Abe Hackleman and John Davis returned during the past week from a winter's sojourn in the Ochoco and Crooked river country. They say the winter was extremely mild there; stock wintered without a particle of feeding, and are literally rolling in fatness. One or two lots of beef cattle sold for $35 per head recently, but there are few buyers in the country, and money there, like here and everywhere else, is decidedly tight. There are now two postoffices in Ochoco valley—Prineville and Ochoco; two schools also in the valley. Everybody is healthy and happy."

The Albany Register says the survey of the Albany and Santiam canal is completed, and a profile map thereof placed in the hands of the Directors of the Company on Wednesday. Capt. Smith has done his work faithfully and well, leaving nothing more in the line of engineering or surveying to be asked for at his hands. The survey commences near William Gore's residence, where Mr. Morris' contract ends, (whose contract, by the way, embraced all the deep cutting on the whole line of the canal,) probably one mile and a half from the Santiam river, and runs to James Elkins' barn, something over half a mile south of the Court House in this city—a distance between the termini of eleven miles, or 112,231 yards. The deepest cut is a fraction over 6 feet. In crossing one or more sloughs probably some fluming will have to be done, but not a great amount. The estimated cost of digging the canal is $16,864 65, which, added to the portion already under contract would swell the amount to near $25,000. To this must be added the cost of headgates, widening the canal, to Elkins Bro.'s mills to the Santiam river, the cost of conveying the water through this city to an outlet in the Calipooia or Wallamet, and the erection of a reservoir somewhere in the rear of the city. These figures may be too high—but should the work of digging and completing the canal for business cost $75,000, it will be the cheapest and best paying investment for our people that can be undertaken at this time.

OAK TERRITORIES.

Mr. C. Scott died in Olympia last Wednesday at the advanced age of 75 years.

Cram, Wine, Sherry and Fall are names of jurymen at Walla Walla. We should think so.

The Assessor of Ada county, Idaho, gets a salary and perquisites amounting to about $4,000 per annum.

The religious revival at Boise City is bearing tangible fruit. A purse of gold dust worth $65 was recently presented to the minister.

The Olympians fear they will have to call on the milk venders unless the aqueous element is more copiously supplied by the Water Company.

The Waldron troupe is expected to return to the Sound in the first days of March. They played to good houses in Seattle and are now in Victoria.

Travel between Seattle and Olympia is very brisk. The steamer on a recent trip between the two points only lacked one of having as many passengers as the law allows her to carry.

The Bellingham Bay Coal Co.'s ship Lookout, 1,068 tons measurement, has again been placed in the trade between their mine and San Francisco. She has recently returned from a trip to Newcastle, N. S. W., from which place she brought a cargo of 1,206 tons bituminous coal.

During the week ending January 25th, postoffices were established at Newaukum, Lewis county, and at Nootsack, Whatcom county. L. J. Davis was made postmaster of the first and Wm. Hampton of the last. William G. Call was also appointed postmaster at Grand Prairie, Lewis county.

Dr. M. C. Merrick instituted on the evening of Feb. 14th, at Port Ludlow, Union Encampment, No. 12, C. R. C. The following is the list of elected officers: Geo. W. Harris, C.; Della McNatt, J. C.; Wm. George, R. S.; H. Lemon, F. S.; John D. Phuney, C. H.; W. D. Holland, I. G.; Sidney Burnham, O. G.

The area of Washington Territory is estimated at 45,000,000 acres. Up to June 30, 1872, only 5,773,719 acres had been surveyed. Idaho contains 55,000,000 acres, of which 1,524,055 had been surveyed; Utah, 54,000,000, and 3,762,946 surveyed, and Arizona 72,000,000, with only 1,951,848 acres surveyed. These figures serve in some measure to show what a small portion of the Pacific is yet "yet known to the whites."

The Grand Master of the Masonic Order in Washington Territory has decided that every unaffiliated Master Mason has the right to petition any particular Lodge in this jurisdiction he may choose, for membership therein. A rejection for membership does not per se impair his Masonic standing, nor his privilege of renewing his application at any time; or, should he so desire, of applying to any other Lodge in the jurisdiction for affiliation.

The Olympia Tribune says: "Notwithstanding all the complaints we have heard respecting the North Pacific Railroad Company, at whose door it has lately been the fashion to lay the blame for hard times, we seriously question whether the people of Olympia and Puget Sound generally, are not in a prosperous condition when compared with those of other sections. With one or two exceptions, our business men wear smiling countenances and speak in cheering terms of their trade; their departments and language are not those of men falling in arrears.

GENERAL NOTES AND NEWS.

A bed bug shooting match is the biggest thing announced for the near future of La Grosse.

O'Brien, Iowa, boasts of weather "cold enough to make a polar bear wear arctic overshoes."

A Kentucky man has been married in the same house, and by the same minister, to four sisters.

A woman in Birmingham, England, was lately fined $200 for giving a good character to a bad servant.

The copper product of the mines in the Lake Superior region for the year 1872 was about 15,174 tons.

The Indiana legislature is having its annual discussion in making divorces harder to get in that State.

A Western editor says of a neighboring editor with a quivering eyelid "that he stutters in the left eye."

The Temperance Alliance.

It will be seen by referring to the report of the proceedings of the Temperance Alliance, which appears in another column, that the meeting has been anything but harmonious. The wrangling and discord which characterized the endeavor to secure an organization, cast odium on this effort to unite the temperance people of the State in a common endeavor to suppress intoxication and the evils that spring from it. The scenes of Thursday afternoon demonstrate the necessity of a more compact organization, with definite tests of qualification for membership. In the catholicity of its spirit, the Alliance has opened the way for disputes that will end only with the establishment of some practicable test, and the rigid adherence to it when established. If it was the intention of the Alliance to deny representation to the delegates sent from the Woman Suffrage Association, that fact should have been clearly and perfectly understood from the first—or at least before such delegates were chosen. By defining its position clearly upon the qualifications of members the Alliance would have secured harmonious action, and could have devoted its energies to the great matter for which it was organized instead of frittering them away in harmful contention. We hope before the final adjournment of this session the Alliance will agree upon a rule that will not admit of two constructions, and will take pains to see that the law be generally understood throughout the country before the time shall arrive for selecting delegates to the next annual session.

The Road to Success.

As there are many persons in every community who would like to secure appointments to office by the general government, we publish, in the hope of assisting such, the following receipt, which we have seen tried with signal success:

Get to be editor of an influential newspaper, and open an assault through its columns upon some prominent Federal official, calling him a "mercenary" and a member of the "mercenary brigade," and applying such other language to him as will wound his sensibilities. After keeping up this attack for some time, fall into company with a friend of the official assailed, and declare to him you are "going for blood," and that you intend never to cease hostilities till the said official is decapitated. This, the friend will, of course, tell to the official, and the latter will see the necessity of doing something to silence you. He will come and ask you what he can do to be saved from your persecution. This will be the crucial moment for you. Do not prove yourself unequal to the emergency. Accept no mean peace offering. Tell the official that he must take up a collection to pay your way to Washington. He will not refuse. Make this your ultimatum. When the money is obtained take it, and set out upon the journey. If by any means you can get free passes on the steamships and railways, you may pocket the price of a ticket—clear gain. When you arrive at Washington—well, the rest is easy. And when the appointment is obtained keep faith with the official you have black mailed, and never say "mercenary" or "mercenary brigade" again.

As we said before, we once knew this receipt to be tried, with the most satisfactory results. It brought a Collectorship of Customs, which is always regarded as a good thing in the matter of money, even if one confines his receipts to the legitimate fees and salary of the office; and it is said the amount can be swelled indefinitely, and almost ad libitum, by some means with which we are not acquainted sufficiently to state them specifically. The person we knew to try it did very well. He is now "as fat as a fool," and is regarded as a person of very respectable connections over and above all his debts, liabilities and property exempt from execution.

Live Stock Statistics.

The monthly report of the Agricultural Bureau for January, which has just come to hand, contains a comparative statement of the numbers and prices of live stock in January, 1872 and 1873. This statement is compiled from the returns to the annual circular sent out by the Bureau, and shows that the number of horses, cattle and sheep has increased while the number of swine has diminished slightly. In some of the States there has been a slight falling off in horses, cattle and sheep, but the decrease is more than compensated by the increase in other States. Oregon shows an increase in all three classes of animals, and also augments her production of pork.

Horses and cattle are somewhat lower on an average than last year, and sheep have advanced. These fluctuations vary considerable in different States. Horses bear the highest prices in New Jersey where the lowest class is stated at $48 12, and the highest at $147 50; and the lowest in Texas, where the average values range from $15 32 to $51 29, according to class. California, Missouri, Oregon, Iowa and Illinois come next above Texas, standing in the order here named.

Cattle have advanced in the Cotton States, and in some part of New England. In the Northwest this species of property has declined in value from five to ten per cent. Cattle, like horses, are lowest in Texas, the prices in that State being quoted at $3 for yearlings, $4 12 for two year olds, $7 56 for three year olds, and $11 54 for full grown bovves. This is about one-third the average price in Oregon.

The price of sheep has advanced throughout the country, the advance ranging from five to fifteen per cent.

The reports on the condition of stock in the several States show well for Oregon. All classes of stock are reported in a good healthy condition here which is much more than can be said of some other States.

We apprehend the reasonable and candid minds of the country will approve of the provision in the bill for the suppression of polygamy, which legitimatizes polygamous marriages heretofore contracted. The prevention of such marriages in the future, without entailing the evils, disabilities and disgrace of illegitimacy upon the thousands of children—some of them already grown to manhood and womanhood—whose only claim to the legal and social position of persons born in wedlock depends upon the recognition of these plural marriages, will begin the reformation in such a way that its complete triumph is simply a question of time, and of short time at that.

The arrival of the Nevada at San Francisco, is announced. She was about twenty days over due. The delay, it turns out, was caused by the exhaustion of her supply of coal, requiring her to put back to Honolulu to replenish.

OREGON STATE TEMPERANCE ALLIANCE.

THIRD ANNUAL SESSION.

THURSDAY, Feb. 20, 1 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Alliance was called to order by J. H. D. Henderson, acting President, and the session was opened with prayer. The report of the Committee on Credentials was then received. It awarded seats to a large number of delegates, representing temperance societies, lodges, Sunday Schools, Bible classes, Churches, literary societies, &c., the list of whose names is as follows:

The report contained the following recommendation:

That Mrs. A. J. Dunlway, a duly accredited delegate from the State Woman's Suffrage Association, be not admitted; as in the opinion of the Committee, the Association referred to is a political party.

The adoption of the report was moved, whereupon Mrs. Duniway rose and inquired: Who, under the Constitution, are competent delegates? The Chair announced that the Secretary would read the only section of the Constitution that referred to membership. The Secretary accordingly read the following:

Resolved, That the name of the Association shall be the Oregon State Temperance Alliance; that it shall be composed of members of this Convention and other men and women who by their past record shall be known as firm friends to the Temperance cause, and shall cooperate with all Temperance organizations of whatever name and nature.

Mrs. Duniway moved to amend the report by striking out that portion adverse to the admission of the delegates from the Woman Suffrage Association, and inserting the recommendation that they be admitted to seats in the Alliance, and supported her motion in a few well-directed remarks.

John Doe rose to a point of order: that no person excepting members have a right to speak. The Chair sustained the point.

Mrs. D. continued, and again objection was made.

The Chair ruled that no person but such as are mentioned in the report of the Committee are members.

Mrs. Duniway excepted. She said that the report itself could not determine the status of delegates, since that was the subject of discussion.

The Chair—I hold to my ruling with pertinacity.

Mrs. D. insisted that as she was a member last year, she had now a voice in this year's organization.

J. Quinn Thornton remarked that the Committee had considered the matter carefully and they had arrived at the conclusion that the Suffrage Association was a political party and, under the Constitution, not entitled to representation.

Mrs. Duniway—I would like to ask Judge Thornton to find such a provision in the article relating to membership. I call for the reading of the section.

The Secretary read the section, whereupon Mrs. Duniway remarked that that must be a curious political party whose head was cut off. The ballot is the distinctive feature of American politics. Women do not possess that ballot. Then how can their organization be a political one?

Mr. Thornton—Although the woman announces her position with all the gravity of a setting hen (laughter), her sentiments amount to nothing unless it is to prove her sincerity. The association she represents seeks to secure the ballot to woman, and it is all nonsense to pretend that it is not political. I use the words in no offensive sense.

Cries of "Question! Question!"

Rev. W. R. Stewart—I would like to know whether or not the committee on credentials considered the Presbyterian Church of this city a woman's suffrage association. Here are five ladies with credentials which have not received the slightest notice from this model committee.

Mr. Thornton apologized for the neglect of the committee.

The question being on the amendment offered by Mrs. Duniway, General C. A. Reed addressed the house in support of the amendment. He was making a gallant defense, when

Mr. Tilmon Ford rose to a point of order—that none but members were allowed to speak.

The Chair ruled the point not well taken, holding that until the report should be adopted, one person was a member as much as another.

Mr. Ford appealed from the decision of the Chair, arguing that none but last year's members had a right to speak and vote until after the report was adopted or rejected; then, others can be admitted to membership.

The Chair—The gentleman is correct. The Chair reverses the ruling and wants things done as agreeably as possible.

Major Gen. H. Williams—What is the question before the House, and who has a right to vote thereon?

The Chair—The question is on the motion to adopt the amendment to the report, and no one has a right to vote thereon.

Mr. Wooden elaborated a point of order designed to prove that he had the right to vote.

The Chair—Gentlemen, the Chair orred. You have the right to vote.

Mr. Ford—I except to that ruling.

The Chair—I mean under proper limitations, (voice, "Re-reqt!")

Mr. T. H. Cann said he wanted the aid of all good temperance people in these councils, but was adverse to admitting any political party. If the Democratic party should send delegates I should object just as much to admitting them.

Gen. Reed—The gentleman need have no fears that the Democratic party will ever send delegates to a Temperance Convention. [Laughter.]

Mr. ——.—I move the previous question.

The Chair—Is the previous question seconded by the House? A two-thirds' vote will be necessary to sustain the demand.

Mr. Cann rose to a point of order: That it was not competent to amend a report. The Chair overruled the objection.

A Voice—What is the question?

The Chair—The question is on the adoption of the report of the Committee.

Cries of "No! No!" and great confusion.

Amid the babel of noise infernal that followed the decision of the Chair, Mr. W.'s haggard face shot a beam of glory straight to the dais of Agamemnon, which so illuminated the mind of the President that he incontinently doubled on his track, reversed his decision and order was once more restored. The Chair announced that the previous question was under debate (!)

Mr. Driver—Mr. President before you can pass upon this question—

Cries of "Order! Order!"

Mr. Driver—Before you can pass—

Voice—Order it up!

Mr. Driver—You must decide the law.

Voice—Who's Chairman o' this 'ere Convention?

Mr. Driver—If you'll keep quiet so a man can hear himself speak, I'll explain the law!

Voice—Dern the law!

The Chair—Has the previous question been seconded?

Mr. Thornton—The question is on the amendment.

The Chair—The previous question takes precedence of the amendment.

A vote on the previous question was had, resulting in its being ordered.

The Chair—The question is on the amendment.

Mrs. Duniway—Mr. President and Delegates: I have no words to express my regrets for the proscriptive injustice of the Committee on Credentials, whose ruling to-day strikes at the very root of American freedom. The Woman Suffrage Association, whose credentials I hold here, has sent up its delegation, among whom are ministers, physicians and editors,—persons of the highest social and moral standing, all well known public and private advocates of Temperance.

The Committee urges that we are a political party and on this ground would exclude us. I think it would be fair and just for us to be heard on that matter. We do not come here as politicians, but as temperance men and women, claiming an equal interest with churches, Sunday schools, farmers' clubs, medical societies and all other organized bodies. If the Committee believe us to be a political party they err ignorantly; if they are disposed to ostracize us from sinister motives, they err willfully. In either case I appeal from their decision to the Chair. The constitution of this Alliance expressly provides for our admission. It says that it shall be composed of members of this Convention and other men and women who, by their past record, shall be known as friends of the temperance cause, and shall co-operate with all temperance organizations of whatever order. Now, shall gag law be enforced in this body for are we to stand by our rights as free temperance men and women?

Just here Mr. Hopkinson, traveling agent of the S. F. Chronicle, loomed up in the rear of the house and remarked suavely that the question was on the adoption of the report.

The Chair—The gentleman is mistaken. The Chair has frequently stated that it is a matter of grievous doubt in his mind as to what the question really is, but the Chair is inclined to rule that it is on the adoption of the report.

Mrs. Duniway—The question, sir, is on the amendment offered by myself.

Mr. Driver—That's right, Mr. Henderson, that's right!

The Chair—That is not the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. Horton—It's the understanding of the Alliance.

The President ruled that none but last year's members would be allowed to vote.

Mr. Driver contended that such a rule had no precedent. In our National Congress the retiring members do not pass upon the election and qualification of the new members.

The Chair—That's so. Then we cannot tell who has the right to vote until the report of the Committee on Credentials is adopted.

Mr. Wooden interposed an objection to the disfranchising process.

It was finally decided to call last year's roll of members.

A disgusted delegate moved to adjourn. The Chair ruled the motion out of order.

Here a scene of indescribable confusion ensued, after which—

Rev. Mr. Bowers said that he had read, while in the East, an account of last year's proceedings. The performance then was simply disgraceful, and certainly it was worse now. If we can't do better than this let's go home.

The Chair having again ruled that none but last year's members should vote on questions of organization, Major Williams asked: "What body sent this committee out?"

The Chair—The assemblage of people now before me.

Major W.—Was it legal?

Chair—Yes.

Major W.—Then I have a right to vote all the time.

The Chair—All right. Take your seat and vote when your turn comes.

The roll for 1872 was then called. Mr. Mudhom and 296 others failed to respond.

Mrs. Duniway's amendment admitting the suffrage delegates was defeated by ayes 17, noes 22.

Considerable confusion following the announcement, Major Williams said: "I'd like to know what we're doing here?"

The Chair confessed his utter inability to give the desired information.

Mr. Thornton introduced the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Temperance Alliance having for the object of its organization a remedy for the evils resulting from the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, every other subject, whether political, sectional or otherwise, be excluded from discussion as tending to introduce discord and confusion where harmony and order are so essential to the great good we seek.

Mr. ——, introduced a resolution reciting the evils of intemperance and pledging the support of the Alliance to Temperance candidates and no other.

Mr. Patton objected that the resolution of Mr. Thornton, just adopted, forbade the interference of the Alliance in political matters, and urged that since the Alliance had so decided, for the sake of consistency the resolution just offered be rejected. The resolution was referred to the Committee on Resolutions.

A resolution limiting the time and occasion of speeches was adopted.

The election of officers being in order, there were nominated, for President: E. W. Ryan, Mrs. A. J. Duniway and Syl. C. Simpson.

Mrs. Duniway respectfully declined the nomination, saying that she had profited by witnessing the signal failure of the President pro tem. and did not desire to see the enormity repeated.

Mr. Simpson also declined.

Mr. Ryan walked over the track and was elected by a large majority.

Several Vice Presidents were elected.

Miles M. Miller was elected Secretary by acclamation; Rev. W. F. West, Corresponding Secretary; W. Lemon, Janitor.

A motion to admit Miss Virginia Olds, arousell Judge Thorton's ire, and he made some allusions offensive to numerous ladies; whereupon Mrs. Duniway rose to set the matter right.

Mr. Thornton exclaimed: "I hope the President will order the Sergeant-at-Arms to take that crazy woman out of the house," which remark was greeted with loud hisses.

The hasty exclamation of Judge Thornton aroused Mrs. Duniway, who remonstrated with that gentleman upon his intolerant spirit.

Several persons in the rear of the hall began a disturbance which, spreading rapidly, rendered it impossible to hear the lady's voice.

Amid great turbulence, a motion was made to instruct the Sergeant-at-Arms to take Mrs. Duniway from the hall.

The motion was rushed through. The Sergeant-at-Arms advanced to his task with evident pleasure written on his countenance, amid loud imprecations from one or two venerable gentlemen. Mrs. Duniway held her position, the peace officer standing at a respectful distance. When the lady concluded, she took her seat amid loud cheers.

S. C. Simpson moved that Mr. Leland be invited to address the Alliance at its evening session. Referred to the appropriate committee.

Committees on Resolutions, on Constitution and By-Laws, etc., were appointed.

The choice of the Executive Committee was deferred until the morning session of to-morrow.

Adjourned to 4 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

The Alliance met at 7 o'clock and was called to order by the President, who declared that hereafter he should enforce all the orders of the Alliance with rigor and impartiality.

Rev. S. W. Todd having resigned as member of the Committee on Constitution, W. A. Hart was appointed in his place.

Gen. Palmer was admitted as a delegate from Siletz Indian reservation.

Rev. J. L. Parrish was admitted as a delegate from the Oregon Penitentiary.

A letter from O. S. Pheips was read.

Maj. Geo. H. Williams offered a resolution declaring Mrs. A. J. Duniway entitled to a seat as a delegate from the State at large.

Mr. Wooden furnished a characteristic speech. He was afraid Mrs. D. would "run the Alliance as she had threatened to do." He moved to lay the resolution on the table.

The President declared the motion carried.

A division resulted in ayes 74, noes 63.

Mr. D. W. Prentice called for a reading of the names on the division.

The President declared the request out of order.

Mr. Prentice said further, that many who had voted nay had misunderstood the question, and that some had uttered aye so indistinctly that the Secretary could not have heard them.

Mr. P. was summarily disposed of, the President refusing to recognize the demand.

A special committee reported a vote of thanks to the O. & C. R. R. Co., and the O. S. N. Co., for courtesies tendered to delegates, which was adopted.

A resolution propounding intemperance a disease and form of insanity and calling upon the Legislature to erect an Inebriate Asylum was adopted.

A committee was appointed to separate the sheepish delegates from the goatish audience.

Mr. Cann moved to reconsider the vote. Ruled out of order, as Mr. C. had voted in the negative.

Major Williams who voted in the affirmative, renewed the motion.

Mr. ——, rose and moved that a committee to preserve order be appointed.

The President stated the latter motion, when Maj. Williams insisted on his motion.

The President ordered Major Williams to take his seat, which that gentleman refused to do.

The President finally put the motion, which was lost.

The previous question was ordered and the resolution adopted.

The committee appointed at the last session to draft a law for presentation to the Legislature reported that they had fulfilled their instructions, closing with some remarks upon the depravity of the body who refused to pass the act prepared by them.

The matter was postponed until to-morrow.

A resolution was adopted to appoint three persons of undoubted temperance proclivities from each county whose duty it shall be to organize and conduct monthly meetings in their several districts.

A collection was taken to defray the expenses of the hall which amounted to $17 25.

Rev. S. Bowers then addressed the audience on "Dog-Muzzling."

Dr. E. R. Fiske read the following letter from a prisoner in the State Penitentiary:

OREGON STATE PENITENTIARY,
SALEM, FEBRUARY 20th, 1873.

DR. E. R. FISKE—Salem, Dear Sir: I was requested this morning to prepare a letter signifying the feeling of the inmates of this institution on the Temperance question. That they have some feeling, yes more a deep interest in this subject is attested by the fact that nearly one-half of our number committed their crimes while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, and a large percentage of the remainder were led into crime by the use of liquor, and becoming contaminated with the evil influences of various kinds that are attendant upon, and never divided from this infernal practice. To us, the worst feature of this business is that we have to suffer alone, while our partners in crime go scot free. My partners, I mean the liquor sellers. They furnished us with that which aided away from us our reason, honor and moral sense,—these gone, we were in a fit state to commit any crime in the calendar. It seems very strange to us that the same code of laws that finds us guilty of crime, and sends us here as a punishment, licenses the sale, and protects the seller of that which brought us to crime. This may be all right, but there is an inequality here that we cannot account for. We miss our partners, and somehow when we think of how we came here, we think they ought to be here too.

To more particularly define the feeling we have on this subject of Temperance, is simply to say that we carefully take, from our very hearts, intoxicating liquor, and we cannot help inviting its sellers and venders to accept a share of this hatred.

To most of us, the future would be bright, were we to know that when we were released from prison, we could find companions and friends elsewhere than in saloons and dram-shops.

Our greatest dread is that we may be forced into the companionship and associations, (consorting with which brought us here,) from very lack of other and better. Could we know that the saloons and other like hell holes were closed and closed forever, we would thank God and take courage. We would then have a new lease on life for in that case, we could realize that even for us, there would be an opening through which we could enter upon the higher and better life.

In the name of the common humanity which still unites us who are fallen, to you who are not. We ask you to never cease in your efforts until this worst enemy of the peace and happiness of mankind is destroyed.

For myself and for my fellow prisoners, I thank you for this opportunity of expressing our feeling on this (to us) subject of vital interest.

Very truly yours, with respect,

Convict No. 396,
Oregon State Penitentiary.

The Alliance then adjourned to meet at 9:30 A. M. to-morrow.

SECOND DAY.

MORNING SESSION.

FEBRUARY 21, 1873.

The Alliance was called to order at 9:30 A. M. President Ryan in the chair.

The President announced as a committee on finance Messrs. T. H. Cann, J. B. McClane and C. H. Walker.

Mrs. E. H. Taylor was admitted to a seat as a representative of the temperance element of Pennsylvania.

The committee on resolutions presented the following, which were adopted:

WHEREAS, Liquor men claim that the national Government, by taxation of liquor, is bound to support the traffic therefore,

Resolved, That we are opposed to the entire law of granting licenses to sell liquor, or receiving revenue from the same.

Resolved, That at the next meeting of this Alliance in 1874, no persons will be admitted as delegates from any society that has not for its object the spread of temperance, and does not prohibit the sale and use of intoxicating liquors by its members.

The Constitution coming from the committee, elicited considerable debate, which resulted in sending back the instrument to the committee with instructions to report at 1 o'clock.

A. G. Walling, J. H. D. Henderson and W. F. West were appointed to fill vacancies in the committee.

J. D. Wooden, J. D. Locey, A. G. Walling, W. S. Powell, W. B. Carter, J. H. D. Henderson, A. M. Smith, T. R. Cornelius and Wm. Hammond were constituted an Executive Committee.

The President announced as County Committees on Temperance Mass Meetings the following named gentlemen:

Douglas County—Todd, Watkins and Kuykendall.

Lane—Bristow, E. P. Henderson, J. E. Houston.

Benton—Carter, York, Jas. Chambers.

Linn—Hays, J. L. Gilbert, H. C. Clemens.

Polk—A. M. Smith, A. Shreve, B. Lindsay.

Marion—S. C. Simpson, J. B. McClain, E. Ford.

Clackamas—J. H. Lambert, J. D. Locey, W. G. Welch.

Yamhill—J. W. Carey, Dr. J. W. Watts, Cyrus Smith.

Multnomah—W. H. Moore, Jas. Powell, W. A. Hart.

Washington—C. H. Walker, W. A. Mills, M. E. Hoxtor.

Columbia—B. F. Giltner, J. L. Ladd.

Members from remaining counties will be appointed by the Executive Committee.

Dr. C. H. Hall moved to take from the table the resolution admitting Mrs. A. J. Duniway as a delegate at large.

This was the signal for the commencement of a turmoil that defies the graphic powers of mortal man. Dr. Hall underwent a severe cross-examination from the Chair as to whether he voted in the affirmative. That gentleman survived the trying ordeal, and from that time forward the triumph of the liberal element of the Alliance was assured.

A motion to indefinitely postpone the whole subject matter was treated to a crushing defeat at the hands of 80 delegates who voted aye. The negatives summoned 72 noes; a complete reversal of last night's decision.

During the pendency of this motion the Chair decided that members who had been cast out on committee business and had returned to the hall while the vote was being taken were not entitled to a vote. The temper of the house was tested, and the President reversed.

The motion to adopt the original resolution was amended by T. H. Cann so as to include "all the delegates from the Woman's Suffrage Association."

The amendment was indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Ford rose to a point of order: that the effect of indefinitely postponing the Cann amendment was to carry the whole matter along with it.

The Chair refused so to rule.

Mr. Wooden reared a fierce roar which fell like lead upon the ears of the worthy President, who peremptorily ordered the recalcitrant Wooden to be silent. The rebuke of the President afforded occasion for loud applause.

Several other delegates whose mental calibre refused to conform to the laws of ratio and proportion met an easy death at the hands of the wearied Chairman.

The previous question on the resolution of admission was carried after a host of dilatory motions had been interposed.

The defeat of the opponents of the resolution was accomplished by a clear majority of 25, the vote standing 97 ayes to 72 noes. As the result became known the irrepressible of the victorious party vented itself in long and loud cheers.

A motion to adjourn afforded the beaten delegates an opportunity to amend by adding sine die. This amendment was lost by an overwhelming majority.

The Alliance then adjourned till 1 P. M.

The papers of the great farming States of the upper Mississippi valley come filled with complaints of the farmers and interior merchants of the oppressions of the carrying corporations. While money is scarce and hard times pinch close and closer, the carriers still insist upon their high prices for freight. If this is so hard to bear in those States, what is to be said of the condition of our farmers who pay rates vastly higher, in gold coin, than they in the East pay in currency!

A bill has passed Congress prohibiting Territorial Delegates from receiving compensation for transacting business before a Department or for acting as counsel before a court martial.

SATURDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 22, 1873

CITY.

SCARED—NOT HURT.—A gentleman who resides in the upper portion of this city met with a rather laughable adventure the other night During the early part of the evening he had occasion to go out to his stable, situated in one corner of the block on which his house stood The rain was descending in torrents, and the night was pitchy dark; but the gentleman made his way to the stable without difficulty On gaining admittance, he began slowly to grope his way toward the back part of the building The darkness was almost palpable, which required him to move with caution When a few feet from the door, he stumbled over some large object, which the prevailing darkness prevented him from determining whether it was "man, beast or devil?" Scarcely had he touched the object, before with a suppressed, sort of hollow, it rose to its feet Our hero had, in his haste and fright, placed a foot on each side of whatever the nameless creature might be. He now found himself bestride some huge beast, more swift for aught he knew, than the far famed steed upon which the hapless Mazeppa was bound The fore and aft of the animal began to be elevated and depressed in no very gentle manner In fine the "bucking" process soon landed our hero far over the creature's head, when, with a snort and a roar, it plunged out at the door, and escaped into the int He hastily gathered himself up, and rushed to the house to procure a light Imagine the surprise and disgust when, instead of finding a grizzly bear or some other ferocious beast, he discovered his neighbor's harmless old mulley cow, which had sought protection in his barn from the raging storm The gentleman talks of suing his neighbor for indirect damages by reason of his terrific fright He doesn't swear exactly, but he declares that he will never visit his barn after dark without a light.

STATE BUSINESS DIRECTORY.—A considerable portion of the manuscript for the new State Directory, published by S. J. McCormick, and prepared and compiled by J. Mortimer Murphy, is now in the hands of the printer, and the book will doubtless make its appearance soon The forthcoming Directory gives promise of being superior in all respects to any work of a similar character yet published in the State. All the information contained which may be of interest to residents of Oregon, or to persons who live elsewhere, and are desirous of obtaining knowledge concerning the resources of the State, of a most reliable character, having been gathered by Mr. Murphy from personal travel and observation. The advance sheets indicate that the Directory will include a number of important features of our State, of which no preceding work of the kind has yet treated. Aside from a large amount of statistical matter, the Directory will contain a description of the physical, moral, social and educational condition of the State. Several chapters will be devoted to describing the geology, botany, mineralogy, climatology, zoology, flora, forests, natural productions, and the manufactories of the State. Had it not been for the total destruction of all the materials of the Directory in the terrible conflagration of last December, the work would have been ready for distribution by this time

AN ANCIENT GUN.—We are informed that a gentleman residing in the vicinity of Hillsboro recently discovered a rude and ancient gun deeply imbedded in the earth. All who have seen this specimen of workmanship pronounce it to have been made by the aborigines many years ago. This peculiar piece of mechanism presents in all its points a crude and limited knowledge on the part of the person who made it, when compared with the present high grade of mechanics. The barrel is evidently made of copper with a rim or band around the breech. It has no lock, nor is there any evidence of its ever having had one. A match stock is made of oak, and shows a peculiar workmanship in the evident lack of tools

This curiosity we learn will be sent to Mr. Dave Raffety of East Portland, and added to the museum of that gentleman.

STEAMER SAILED.—The steamship Orizimmo sailed for San Francisco late evening from this port, having on board the following passengers

W F Marsh, Louis E Hermann, Jacob Starr, G O Hall, J G Sutherland, A A Webber, wife and child, Chas Kohn, Jacob Mayer, Miss E Ford, Mrs S Gordon and child, J H Taylor, James J Walsh Wm Anderson, James Howe, Chas Fredwell, Rasa Staylick, A L Bickingham, H L Conner, Miss Bella Hawson, J Davidson, H S Bessey, J A Brownell and wife, Mrs J J Comstock, H F Lukndorf, H J Stano, C Horestsky, J P Smith and wife, Geo W Prescott, W E East, J F Robinson, D Mathews, Miss Jennie B Jones, and thirty-five in steerage

SPECIAL SERVICES.—On Wednesday next, being Ash Wednesday, High Mass will be celebrated in the Cathedral Church at 9 o'clock A. M., immediately before which the ashes will be blessed In accordance with the recommendation of the Rev. Archbishop, devotions will be held during Lent every Wednesday and Friday evening, beginning at half past 7 o'clock, and Mass will be said every morning at 8 o'clock instead of at 7, as usual, in order to give those who can an opportunity to assist.

COAST MISSION.—We learn from the Sentinel that the Rev. John Heinrich, heretofore teacher at St. Michael's College, has been appointed missionary priest for the counties of Douglas, Coos and Curry, to reside at Roseburg, Oregon Father Heinrich will leave for his mission next Monday morning, and will officiate at Roseburg on Ash Wednesday Rev. Bertrand Orth takes his place at St Michael's College

Some idea of the number of sewing machines sold in Portland may be given. We notice in McCormick's Directory one agency (Home Shuttle) has sent out over 1,000 during the past three years Several large cases were received and forwarded to the country Thursday.

NOT HEARD FROM.—The bark Edward James has not yet been heard from by her owner, Mr. Moffatt. This bark sailed from the Sound country with a cargo of lumber for Shanghai, several months ago. Advices from her are expected about the 10th of next month.

TAKING ON WHEAT.—The bark Northumbria, which was drawn alongside McCraken's wharf on Wednesday, has completed discharging ballast, and is now receiving wheat for Liverpool.

MORE CATTLE.—A large drove of young cattle from Washington Co. arrived in the city yesterday. These cattle will be taken up to the Dalles this morning.

Meussdorffer has received samples of new and stylish spring styles in silk hats Call and select from the variety. His stock is immense.

ASH WEDNESDAY.—Next Wednesday, the first day of Lent, is called Ash Wednesday, it being a day of public penance and humiliation through out the world

Window shades, cornices, curtains, picture nails, etc., also all kinds of upholstery work done at Paul Richter's

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Two concerts next week.

This has been the ball week of the season.

The gas company has 600 meters in use through out the city

Ben Holladay, it is reported, will return to the State about the last of March.

By a scratch a mail bag was thrown aboard the Orizimmo as the last line was thrown in.

Baker Post, G. A. R., have invited our brethren of the country posts to attend their grand ball and concert.

The Turn Verein masquerade, and the Baker Post ball will be the next big things in the dancing line

The streets had an animated appearance yesterday, which was mainly attributable to the departure of the steamer.

The tug Morrimac, Captain Hobson in charge, will leave for Astoria at daylight to-morrow She will probably take the Melancthon from Westport to Astoria

The Sentinel is unkind enough to destroy all the romantic effects of a sensational story lately given in the columns of the Herald, by stripping off some of the few colored misrepresentations How the baseless fabric vanished into thin air when touched by the wand of truth

MARSH, C M., holds himself in readiness to forward all orders for anything in his line, to all quarters of the city He is bound to keep ahead in everything and to satisfy yourself in the matter, call on him at his new location ... st of Yamhill and First streets If he can't furnish you with the article you desire there, you can reckon on not getting it in the city His prices have been adjusted to suit all classes. Take a peep at the stock in store and fall not to stop to-night Prompt attention will be paid to your wants.

THE GRAND BALL OF THE SEASON

SOIREE OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIAL CLUB—A LARGE ATTENDANCE.

The ball given by the Young People's Sociable Club, in Masonic Hall, last evening in aid of that most worthy institution of Portland, the "Home," was as select an affair of its sort as any we have ever witnessed in this city The fact that it was given by the most celebrated club of terpsichore ans in the Metropolis was sufficient of itself to insure a large attendance of the beauty and fashion, were not a noble institution to be benefited Whether it were the charity alone, or the fact that it was to be the closing festival of the season, is immaterial, as the purpose was accomplished of

of the worshippers of that muse typical of the grace of motion For the past week or two the affair was discussed among the ladies, and long and weary were the nocturnal vigils to study the most becoming costume This assertion we make without authority, as none of the ladies so informed us, and we base our opinion on the many elegant costumes which encircled the fair creatures last evening Everything had been done by the

that would insure the pleasure of the worshippers, and for that they are entitled to the thanks of those who had the pleasure of attending The following gentlemen formed the committee R H Thompson, Daniel Leahy, J W Cook, W H Harris, H M DeFranz. Nothing being left undone that could make it, what it was designed to be, the most recherche affair of the season, all returned home after a night of unalloyed pleasure in a handsome style, yet was devoid of that tawdriness which is often displayed on such occasions, and so suggestive of lack of good taste The side walls were embellished with looped banners, and pendant evergreens sprinkled with artificial flowers were ranged over the entrance The chandeliers were environed by spiral wreaths of perennials, with frosted work beneath. Over the stage was a profusion of evergreens and immortels, and the lower portion bore in golden letters the words, "The Home," and the name of the Club. Among the entangling perennial wreaths in the center was a fine bouget of artificial flowers, and at the corners of the stage half a dozen cages were suspended, and their yellow occupants lent their song to the sensuous music.

At 9 o'clock the hall began to fill, and an hour later all were engaged in and from that hour forth the stately quadrille, vivacious polka, gliding waltz and dashing galop followed each other in rapid succession. There were but few wall flowers, a fact most pleasing, and for which the Committee deserve commendation The character of the dancing was also good, none of the usual confusion disturbing the pleasure. It was also devoid of that formality so suggestive of primness, or rather the want of cultured ease, hence all enjoyed themselves thoroughly.

THE COSTUMES,

while not pretentious, were tasty and often elegant, but want of space prevents our referring to them in detail. White was the prevailing color, and the trimmings were of varied hues. There were only one or two of the decolcotte order. The head dresses were of the the "roll order" and the decorations consisted of a few flowers. Want of space forbids us entering into further details so we must content ourselves by saying that the entire affair was a success in every manner. We noticed the following ladies and gentlemen present Mesdames J B Wyatt, Thos. Wygant, J. A. Chapman, C. E. Calef, Chas. Hodge, H L. Hoyt, J. B Montgomery, J. J. Henderson, W W. Upton, J. N. HOURS OF PLEASURE.

Mr. James L—w, a young merchant who has been with us for the past twelve months, together with a few of his bachelor friends, entertained some sixteen couples at their residence—corner of Morrison and East Park streets—on Wednesday evening Those present included a number of English gentlemen and their lady friends, besides several of our most prominent business men. The ladies appeared attractive, being attired in the height of fashion, and the gentlemen were not behind in this particular

It would be difficult to say who was the belle of the evening, as so many were entitled to that honor. Each made a most brilliant appearance, forming, on the whole, a picture really charming. Of course dancing was the principal object in view before the assembly, and it was finally proven that all those who took part, enjoyed this portion of the entertainment The supper was a model of its kind, and the strains of music lent a charm to the affair.

A small but sociable number of friends of Protection Engine Co. No. 4, met at an early hour on Thursday evening at the hall of the company to participate in dancing and the ordinary run of conversation brought up on such occasions The managers kept the dancers on the floor and did all in their power, to make the evening a pleasant one to those who favored the occasion with their presence. Shortly after twelve o'clock the party broke up and all retired fully gratified with the enjoyment received.

Odd Fellow's Hall in East Portland, on last Wednesday evening, presented a gala appearance, being the occasion of a social gathering of young folks who participated in the "art terpsichore" to their heart's content. The occasion was one of rare enjoyment.

Rarely ever have we witnessed a larger assemblage of ladies and gentlemen than were present last evening at the Armory Hall on the occasion of the Tenth Annual Ball given by the Washington Guard About fifty couple were in attendance The large hall was crowded to an uncomfortable extent by ladies and their gallant escorts, while all available space in the capacious room was used by the dancers Conspicuously displayed about the Armory was the National colors, while the walls, ceiling and chandeliers were profusely and tastily decorated with evergreen festoons The music on the occasion was furnished by Bray & Parrott's Cotillion Band, and by its superior quality, lent zest and animation to the scene The ball ons safely be set down at one of the grand social events of the season Dancing was indulged in to a late hour, when the guests dispersed well satisfied with the evening's entertainment.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

THE NORTH PORTLAND SCHOOL

Accompanied by Director Glenn, we paid a visit yesterday to the North Portland Public School, under the principalship of Prof King The number of pupils in attendance at this school is something over four hundred The school is divided into the Grammar, Intermediate, and Primary Departments

We were very favorably impressed with the general arrangement of each of the several departments, and the modes of imparting instruction adopted by the teachers in each Especially deserving of mention, is the manner pursued by Prof King, who has personal charge of the Grammar department His manner of imparting instruction to the pupils is certainly novel, and cannot fail of impressing one with favor His first object is to secure the entire and exclusive attention of the pupil This is accomplished by the introduction of a series of mental exercises which pleases, absorbs all the energies of the mind and imparts the desired knowledge By this mode, hard and difficult studies to most juvenile minds, are invested with a pleasant interest which can be acquired in no other way. Gradually, and step by step, the mind of the pupil is led, until it derives pleasure in the investigation of the several branches of knowledge taught The attention and interest secured, each study is entered into with zest and avidity and a greater degree of proficiency acquired than when strict attention is enforced, or the modes of teaching become mechanical. Prof King possesses the happy faculty of imparting instruction by keeping the pupils in a good humor, and never for a moment allowing the interest to abate. As a public instructor he certainly has no superior in the country. He is assisted in his department by Miss F. Holman, who has been connected for several years with t public schools of the city, as an instructor The pupils in this department will probably number seventy five.

The Intermediate Department, situated on the first floor of the building and comprising nearly a hundred pupils, is under the joint instruction of the Misses Gibson, and Gallaghorr

The Primary Department, on the same floor, comprises a greater number of pupils than either of the other departments, and is under the management of the Misses Dwyer, Monnastes and Blythe.

In each of the departments named, better order prevails than can usually be found in schools where the majority of the pupils are so small. Every pupil entertains the most exemplary respect and affectionate obedience to the teachers, who in return seemed to perfectly comprehend the true relations which ought to exist between the instructor and instructed.

This school, as well as the other public schools of Portland, is under the musical instruction of Professor McGibbony. This gentleman visits each of the three departments daily to give instruction in music The course of instruction given by Mr McGibeny makes no pretension to a thorough mastery of vocal music, and can more properly be designated "musical calisthenics." The result aimed at by such a course is to secure a more perfect physical development of the pupils, as much as the cultivation of the musical faculties. The exercises each day consist of a series of light gymnastics, accompanied by vocalization. Such a course continuously practiced is well calculated to develop the body, give the necessary amount of exercise, while it imparts power, flexibility, and a perfect control of the voice. Constant training of this character will not only secure the above desirable results, but will give a light and graceful air to every movement of the body, and produce beneficial effects in the improvement of the manners of the pupils. This training includes a necessarily superficial attention to the principles of elocution, to correct articulation, besides the development and expansion of the respiratory organs.

Great credit, we think, is due Mr. McGibeny for the degree of proficiency the pupils of the several departments have made in the art of "musique magic" while under his instructions.

From observations, casual, and consequently rather imperfect, we feel justified in saying that there appears to exist no deficiencies in any of the departments of the North Portland Public School. The instructors, from Principal to the subordinates, seem well qualified for their various positions of responsibility, while nothing is omitted which should necessarily be included in a thorough preparatory course—mental, moral, or physical. A few hours could not be more profitably or pleasurably employed than by a visit to this department of the public schools of Portland.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

Monday the 6th of January, was celebrated by the Greek Church in New York as the Russian Christmas.

In the State of Missouri, since the war, a single missionary of the American Sunday School Union has organized twenty-seven churches.

The pews of Mr. Beecher's church have been rented the present year for $60,200. The highest premium paid was $360, and the lowest $1.

The population of the Lutheran Church throughout the world is estimated at from forty to fifty millions, about one-half of Protestant Christendom.

Out of eleven hundred Congregational ministers in New England, only thirty-eight have had continuous charge of the same church twenty four years.

The mite-chests, issued by the Domestic Missionary Committee of the Episcopal Church, have within three years brought into the treasury nearly $60,000.

The Presbyterian Mission Board have organized churches among the Indian tribes of the West, comprising nearly one thousand members. They employ thirty laborers, including lady teachers and helpers, in carrying on this work.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in this country was organized on Christmas Day, in the year 1784, in Lonely Lane Chapel, Baltimore. Some sixty ministers were present on the occasion, among whom were Francis Asbury and Thomas Coke.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.

Judge for yourselves—what is the trouble with the trustees and members of the A M. E. Zion Church of Portland? We desire that everyone will read and understand In the issue of the OREGONIAN of February 13th there appeared a preamable and resolution purporting to have been passed by the Trustees of the A M E. Zion Church, the wording of which is calculated to mislead the public and to injure the church over which I have presided during the past thirteen months as well as to work a personal injury to myself I therefore feel it a duty to the church as well as myself to make this public statement of facts Having been appointed by the California Annual Conference December, 1871, to take charge of this Diocese, I arrived here the 13th day of January 1872, and found the Church closed against me. The reason of this condition of things was that the Trustees were trying to turn the property over to another connection The reason assigned for this measure was that the membership was small and the debt large and pressing for payment and they said by going over to another connection the debt would be liquidated But my presence with the assistance of the Lord defeated them in their efforts and made many enemies to me which enmity still exists.

I have never faltered in my efforts for the good of the church, and this notwithstanding my salary has been but a mere pittance, amounting for the whole time to only the sum of $68 and $10 of this sum was paid back to the church. I have by my efforts reduced the indebtedness of the church from $347 to about the sum of $170.

Now while I do not desire to impose myself upon an unwilling church, yet having been assigned by the Conference to take charge of the Diocese and particularly of this church, and it having been closed against me a second time without legal and just cause, and in a manner not in accordance with the discipline of the church —a majority of the members not concurring with the Trustees in the exclusion of the pastor as provided by the discipline, I shall take such legal measures as may be necessary to re-open the church to public worship, and it is hoped that there may not be much delay in accomplishing this object. I. F ANDERSON,
Elder, Presiding.

An Easy Way to Health.

The appetite is generally keener in winter than in summer, but the same low temperature which begets an increased desire for food, is apt to decrease the ability of the stomach to digest it The most aggravated cases of acute dyspepsia occur at this season, and the best, and, in fact, the only way to control and cure them, is to stimulate and tone the stomach and invigorate and regulate the secretive and discharging organs. To do this promptly, safely and thoroughly (without involving any change in the ordinary habits of the invalid), a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will be necessary. In order to accomplish a radical cure of indigestion, it is not enough to influence the organs of digestion. The liver, the intestines, the circulation, every organ and every secretion concerned in the work of assimilating the food and in carrying off the waste matter of the system, must be brought into a natural condition. Upon all these portions of the living machinery, the great vegetable medicine, which stands at the head of all modern restoratives, acts powerfully and beneficially The feeble should take at least one dose daily at all seasons of the years and it may be taken with great benefit twice a day by all who are predisposed to dyspepsia, biliousness or nervous attacks. Ladies will find it a very present help in the latter class of complaints, and indeed in all the ailments incident to the sex.

The wonderful vegetable restorative is the shoot-ancher of the feeble and debilitated. As a tonic and cordial for the aged and languid it has no equal among stomachics. As a remedy for the nervous weakness to which women are especially subject, it is superseding every other stimulant. In all climates, tropical, temperate or frigid, it acts as a specific in every species of disorder which undermines the bodily strength and breaks down the animal spirits.

A FLEETING FORTUNE.

Covetousness is supposed to be the favorite vice of age which seems to me strange I am old and no longer hunger after wealth What good would it do me now? My habits are settled my passions are extinct quiet freedom from pain and care and the preservation of my eyesight are the only blessings I crave I have enough for food and clothing not enough tempt others to flatter cajole and deceive me But early in life I longed for riches with an unwholesome yearning money seemed to me the greatest good yet even money was not worth toiling for When I indulged in airy castle building—which was very often—I always pictured myself as finding a treasure landing a double event at tremendous odds having a fortune left me or becoming suddenly rich in some equally facile manner—never slowly, by hard work In many novels the hero, poor determined to achieve wealth and fame at the end of one chapter, and when the next opens, he has done so The intervening years of humdrum are jumped I wanted to jump them, too I was quite willing to be ten years older and ten thousand times richer could such a bargain have been made But it couldn't and I dawdled the ten years away and was just as poor as at the commencement And yet I was once for a few hours actually and literally a rich man and it happened in a way which my fancy had not pictured

I was fond of traveling about and my small means caused me to seek inexpensive modes of conveyance My legs were the cheapest, and I walked all over England, Scotland and Wales but the coast stopped me for I could not swim the channel Pay for my passage I must, but I would pay as little as I could help so I chose a long sea route from London to Holland As the boat started in the small hours of the night, I passed the evening in mild dissipation Dined off a chop and cheese with a pint of cooper, ' followed by a pipe and glass of rack punch Sat in the pit of a theatre from curtain rise to curtain set, only leaving when the brown holland appeared Then a potato at a singing tavern brought me to half past twelve and it was time to go to my inn in Holborn for my lug gage This was not extensive, consisting, merely of a leathern bag, which could be worn when I hiked as a knapsack, and with this in my left hand and in stout oak stick tipped with a formidable ferrule in my right I sought the dock This must seem so very eccentric to young people of the present day, that I think it better to mention that it was upwards of thirty years ago—cabs and habits of luxury have considerably increased since then In the neighborhood of the Tower, the streets were quite deserted, and it was a chilly one experience to hear one's footsteps re echoing in the very centre of the capital of Bustle. The traffic, rolling dockwards by the main arteries of the city, only reached the ear as a faint, muffled murmur, like that of the distant sea Turning into a small place—a triangle of houses, with a paved court in its center—however, I came upon a group of three men, who seemed to be engaged in a scuffle, and supposing it to be a drunken row, I was passing on without notice, when one of them called out "Murder!

What a fine old English word that is—how expressive! The sight of it in large print gives the blood a pleasant curdle, and forces the purchase of an evening paper upon the man whose coppers would never be charmed out of him by any simple "assassination" But heard in the stillness of night, there is a muttered horror in the word which is appalling.

I am not a chivalrous man, I shrink instinctively from incurring danger or even discomfort on behalf of a friend, let alone a stranger, but there was an earnestness about that cry which arrested my steps Again, in a more stifled tone "Murder! Help!"

I advanced towards the group, and saw, by the light of a dim lamp, that two of the men were stooping over a third, who lay on the ground. One of these rose on hearing my footsteps, and warned me with an oath to go my way and mind my own business, and as I did not heed him, he raised his right arm and ran at me. Knowing something of fencing, I lunged as he came up, catching him low in the chest with the ferrule of my stick, and he rolled over into the road with a gasp and a groan, and lay there doubled up His mate stood up, hesitated a moment, irresolute, and then turned to flee, I struck him over the head as he went, but failed to bring him down, as he got away Glad enough to be rid of him, I went to the assistance of his victim who still lay on the pavement, but he was not seriously injured, and when I had loosened his neckcloth, and poured some of the contents of my traveling flask down his throat, he was able to get up. Fortunately for him, garroting had not been yet cultivated as a science, and he was only half throttled

His first care was to feel a pocket inside his waistcoat, having done which, he said in a tone of intense relief "They have not got it! Thanks to you, young man, they have not got it! You won't leave me? You will see me to the boat? I can walk Oh, yes, I are better now"

"Don't be afraid," said I, "I will not leave you till you are safe. What boat do you mean?"

'The Rotterdam"

"Why, I am going by that myself I am glad you can walk, for we have not got overmuch time to lose."

We were not more than a quarter of a mile from the wharf, and had half an hour to do it in, but I did not think it incumbent upon me to go to the assistance of the man who served me as a plastron, and who still lay in the road, so we went our way, and left him there, and whether he came round presently, or received any permanent injury to his constitution from that poke in the stomach, I know not

The man I had rescued was gray haired, with a wizened face deeply scored by wrinkles, and a frame which did not seem capable of making the stubborn resistance which he must have done in defence of his property The cab in which he started for the docks had broken down, and afraid of being late, he had taken a short cut through the by streets on foot, and had been set upon by the rascals with whom I found him That was the simple account he gave me on our way to the wharf, which we reached in time As for his luggage, that had been taken on board in the morning, when his berth was chosen The latter precaution I had neglected, but found no difficulty in securing sleeping accommodation, for the vessel was not crowded; indeed, there were but three passengers besides my self and the old man. Not being used to five hours of theatre, followed by a walk and an encounter with street thieves, I was tired and turned in soon after we started

When I awoke there was no vibration, no din of revolving paddles. Had I slept through the passage, and were we at our journey's end? Hardly, for in that case we should be in still water, not swaying to this side and that, bending backwards, pitching forwards, and bringing up with a jerk, like a sleepy man during a long sermon, as we were doing I sat up and looked over the side of my berth which was on the upper tier, and saw the head of my rescued old man peering out from the sleeping place below

"Do you think there is anything the matter?" he asked "Why are we not going on? Why does that bell keep on ringing"

Roused by this unpleasant suggestion of peril, I wriggled off my shelf, managed after several bad shots, to get my feet into giddy boots and my arms into intoxicated coat-sleeves, reeled up to the dock, and found a fog

It was one of the densest I had ever been in, you could not see across the dock, and a man standing a couple of yards off resembled a figure in one of Turner's later pictures The effect was the more confusing from the mist not being stationary, for a stiffish breeze sent rolling masses of it sweeping over us The waves of fog mingled with the waves of water, and the eye could not distinguish which was which, while the large bell forward kept up a continual tinkle, tinkle, in muffled tones as though the fog were composed of wool pulled out very fine, particles of which had clogged the clapper

I am happy to be able to boast that I did not worry the captain, as passengers are so foolishly apt to do when things look a little backward, but I got near him, and listened and observed, and made out by degrees that we were somewhere in the channels about the Nore, and in momentary expectation of being run into, or grounded on the sands, and that, when we revolved our paddles, which we did at intervals, the chances of running into something else was added The lead was constantly being heaved and at one time when the water shoaled very much, the mate suggested anchoring, but the captain noted that this would increase our risk of being run down and preferred keeping loose and able to dodge about—of course, using nautical expressions which I cannot pretend to repeat

Directly the state of affairs became obvious to me I went below and brought up my old mon for in case of some other ship's boat suddenly crushing into our sides there would be a number of those who were in her watch of course—if you will pardon a sailoring term in consideration of its extraordinary aptness very nasty And he was grateful for the danger of a collision was very real Probably the mouth of the Thames is full of toy but if not know that vessels enter it by a number of roads duly buoyed out and lighthoused These roads or channels long, narrow and the number of steamers and homewards bound ships very great a thick fog or a snow storm is a serious peril

About noon the wind increased in violence and blew the fog away, so that we were able to go on fearlessly and by and by when the excitement had calmed down my old man grew pleasant and chatty

The sea ran rather high but as neither of us suffered from sea sickness this tended to raise our spirits, as the strong air sharpened our appetites and though every now and then a big wave would shiver itself against our weather bow and send a shower of its fragments sweeping across the deck we got well under the shelter of the paddle box and enjoyed it

To my surprise on one occasion when he wanted to draw my attention to something, I happened to be looking another way, my companion spoke to me by name

"You know me?" I asked

'Certainly he replied you sold me some jewels five years ago I even remember the circumstance A property had to be divided amongst the various members of your family and the diamonds were too valuable to be allotted to any individual so that it was necessary to turn them into money, and you had the management of the transaction which was carried out through my agency

He was perfectly accurate in the account which he gave me even recalling to my mind certain minutiæ which I had forgotten though surely they ought to have impressed me more strongly than him I presently remembered his face however, indeed it had struck me as familiar when the lamp light first fell upon it the night before But his hair had turned from black to white, and the loss of his teeth had caused his cheeks to fall in—changes that alter the physiognomy more radically than any other which leave the eyes untouched I suppose that he had made inquiries about me at the time when the business alluded to was transacted and that their result was such as to inspire him with confidence for he talked to me about his present affairs with a freedom which surprised me, though I had done him a good turn For in truth he had that on him which it was well not to blab about He carried in the inner pocket of his waistcoat no fewer than twenty five rough diamonds emeralds and sapphires which he was taking to Holland to cut "I am too old for such business now,' he said ' If you had not come to my rescue last night and those rascals had got hold of the stones I should have been ruined ruined!'

Whether they were his own, or he had but a share in them, or whether they were merely intrusted to him, I cannot say he did not tell me, but the hints he threw out of their value, which, if the diamonds were at all worthy of the expense he was prepared to pay for cutting them, must have been enormous—enormous in the ordinary, not the Monte Cristo or Lothair sense—it is probable they were entirely the property of one man

While we were conversing, the wind was growing in violence, till at length we could not make ourselves heard without difficulty, and the paddle-boxes no longer afforded much protection against the spray, which searched the whole deck

The skipper of a passage boat always takes the freedom of a passenger from sickness at dinner time as a personal compliment, and as our present captain had helped each of us to the everlasting boiled mutton twice, we had a right to his good opinion So he came up to us, and told the diamond merchant that he thought there was going to be a little wind, and he would be more comfortable below On the old man acquiescing, he took him in tow, and guided him safely to the cabin stairs, to my great relief, for I feared that duty would devolve on me, and my legs not being as nautical as my stomach, we should infallibly have rolled together in the lee-scuppers, (whatever they may be,) or overboard The captain came back presently, and as he passed me, he shouted in my ear "I'd go too, if I were you"

"Presently,' I reared in reply "This is a new sight to me Just five minutes more"

"Hold on tight, then"

No need to bid me "hold tight ' I was clinging to the rope I grasped with great tenacity, for over now and then the deck became so steep that my feet slipped from under me, and the wave tops that left their own element and came flying across us, struck me with a force which I had not hitherto attributed to water, unless shot out of the hose of an engine

It was a grand scene I had never witnessed anything like it before I had indeed seen more than one storm on a bold coast, but there is all the difference between a wave breaking on the shore, and a wave in the open as is that there is between a caged lion and a lion in the desert It is a great thing in these ad advances days to be able to feel awe and I experienced that sensation Nature seemed so vast, so irresistible, so puny and weak I had read many descriptions both in prose and verse, of storms at sea, but had never caught an idea of the truth from them, so that I despair of being able to express what I felt It was so absurd that I had ever reckoned the little lives and histories of any kind so highly. I caught a glimpse of the fact that we men, who give ourselves such airs are but as mites in a cheese Doubtless, there may be good mites and bad, wise mites and foolish but when they are mashed up together with a lump of butter, at the point of a knife, they are merged in equal insignificance

As an individual mite, however, I began to feel cold, wet and uncomfortable, and commenced a series of acrobatic performances having for their object the attainment, first of the cabin stairs and then of my berth In time all this was accomplished, though not with out some bruises then perched on myshelf I succeeded in getting rid of my wet outer garments, and rolling myself up in a blanket, was soon rocked to sleep

I was awakened by a violent concussion Have you ever, when going up stairs in the dark expected another step when you were on the level and got a jerk which tried every nerve in your body? Well, that was the effect Whether I was thrown out of my berth, or jumped down in a panic, I don't know I remember trampling on something which must have been the diamond merchant, stumbling into the saloon catching a glimpse of three wild eyed passengers prostrate hitherto with sea sickness but now cured with fear struggling up the cabin stairs against a torrent of water which came pouring down upon them and at last reaching the deck

The day was breaking The wind had gone down somewhat A long line of coast was visible in the distance The steamer was aground heeling over on her port side, and the waves were buffeting her to pieces I managed to climb to the starboard side of the funnel the base of which prevented me from slipping along the steep deck while the bulwarks and paddle box behind formed a barrier against the violence of the waves

But the latter advantage did not last long, plank by plank paddle box and bulwarks were torn to pieces, and the loose splinters were a fresh source of danger A sailor clinging to the skylight over the engines, not far from my station had his arms broken by a mass of wood and iron which was hurled against him, and then the waves, which now washed the deck without opposition had him at their mercy They rolled him back, away from me, then threw him forward almost to my feet, so that I could see his pitiful appealing eyes, but before I could catch him they snatched him away again So they served him to death, and then sported with his corpse.

There were two boats, the captain and crew attempted to get one afloat, but the gear was out of order, or they were clumsy, or the situation was unfavorable Any way, the boat was capsized, and some of those who were trying to launch it were I think crushed, judging by the cry I heard The other boat, which was near me had a side stove in but amongst the ruins of it I saw the yellow rim of a life buoy which I determined to have It was a task of peril and difficulty to reach the place, but I effected it and there inside the boat clinging to the thwarts I found my old man the diamond merchant

Mine' mine ' he cried when I had disentangled the life buoy, and passed one of my arms through it He could not have meant that it was his private property because the name of the steamer was painted upon it I suppose he had formed the intention to appropriate it before I came and his strength had failed him The boat proved a better protection than it had looked When the large waves struck the stranded vessel, they rose up and enveloped her flooding the decks with water which poured off them again in cataracts I found on each occasion that the float was lifted at the same time as we flooded and this of course brought relief when the reflux came I had not as before to cling hard to prevent being dragged away the give of the boat as it floated and subsided eased the strain

The vessel was settling down in the sand burying herself as she swayed burrowing like a mudfish it was plain that no living thing subject to drowning could remain with her long It had been broad daylight now for hours we were in the month of some river for land could be seen on both sides But no vessel coming to our assistance was visible It was a mere question of time however, the wind had gone down, and the sea was not too rough for a good boat we were sure to be seen With the aid of the life buoy a man might well float till he was picked up, and its value was evidently immense

Minel reiterated the old man, clutching at it as the boat was floated for a longer time than it had been yet And when the water receded, and we were once more stranded on the deck he felt in his breast drew out a leather case and cried A fortune for it! A fortune for it!

I looked at the nearest bank, it was quite possible for a strong swimmer to reach it and I was a very strong swimmer Not probable, perhaps but possible Money was not worth steady industry, sustained self denial, but it was worth striking one blow for

On your word as a dying man ' I said, ' do you believe that if I survive I shall get ten thousand for the 75 jewels'

'Double on my oath—double!'

I took my arm out of the life buoy and put it over his shoulder at the same time receiving the leather case

I had run up on deck in my shirt and drawers, and was pocketless, so I took off a handkerchief I had round my head, tied the jewels up in that, and then secured it about my waist

I had hardly done this before the boat in which we were was washed clear off the deck, and as though broken and full of water she proved too shallow and buoyant to go down, I still clung to her for a minute or so, but the waves washed so high over her gunwale, that I had to let go, and swim to a loose oar which was floating near The old man was kept well out of the water by the buoy I saw him a couple of waves off with his shoulders well above it There was no spray now to drown him, for the wind had sunk to a whisper, and, if his strength lasted, he seemed safe He had made a good purchase As for my own prospects, my short trip from the boat to the support to which I now clung was sufficient to show me that I had not enough life in me to swim ashore, no nor half the way, nor quarter of the way My weight slightly submerged the oar, so that, when the crest of a large wave caught me, I got a ducking which robbed me of the breath I wanted so badly But I could fight for a long time yet, having something to hold on by Some part of the steamer which must have been tenable up to this time, was so no longer, for several fresh figures was suddenly to be seen in the water, clinging to anything that would float Three of them made for the buoy, and two reached it, which sealed the fate of the diamond-merchant Not that the buoy became useless, it was as good a support to the three men as my oar was to myself alone, but that was not enough for the old man, who required to be kept higher out of the water I saw him still holding on for some time after he had ceased from all attempts to keep his head up, then he disappeared altogether I nearly met the same fate, I was all but unconscious when a shore-boat came to my rescue. A sailor twisted his hand in the handkerchief tied round my waist, and sought to draw me in the boat by it. It gave way, and I dropped back again into the water He caught me again by the arm, and dragged me back to life But my diamonds, emeralds, and sapphires, had gone to the bottom of the Scheldt

For a few hours, and up to my chin in water all the time, I was a moderately rich man, all the rest of my life I have been a poor one Oh! if that knot in my handkerchief had held or if the Dutchman who rescued me had caught hold of my leg or hair or ear But it is too provoking, I can't bear to think of it —Chamber's Journal

Our advices from Europe indicate a very easy condition of the money market The Bank of England during the week ending the 6th inst gained $1 425 000 and on Thursday of the same week reduced it to rate of 4 ½ per cent The Bank of France also gained in specie deposits $100 000 In London the rate is 4 per cent lower than the minimum established by the Bank of England

The rate of commission which is allowed by law for placing the $500 000 000 of 5 per cent which last year the expense of preparing, issuing advertising and disposing of bonds It is reported however that Mr Boutwell has agreed to allow the interest for ninety days as a bonus to the syndicate in addition to the 2½ per cent It may be asked if the present time be favorable for placing these bonds In the market? The reply to this question is the syndicate is that the stringency in the English and German markets has passed The tuition of the Bank of England is in excess of twenty four millions The most favorable long with 11 from creation for the purpose of reducing the new funding its way into the German market Forty millions a month until May 1st are to be paid by France on the indemnity to Germany It is thought therefore by the syndicate that the time is particularly favorable for this negotiation and that we cannot expect a better opportunity to dispose of these bonds than now exists The favorable effect of this negotiation will be felt rather upon our public credit abroad than upon the money market here About five sixths will go to the holders of the 5 20 coupon bonds held mostly in Germany and now to be called in for redemption It is hoped that the indirect influence of this disposal of this loan will tend to a larger demand for our first class railroad and city bonds in England

Local finances seem to be but little changed from the somewhat unsettled conditions noted several days since but the confidence in a more easy state of the money market is apparently unabated The cheering tone of our advices from abroad would seem to justify this confidence more than any effort which is yet actually experienced in our midst

Oregon Flour at the East

We are glad to notice the fact that occasionally Oregon products are noticed by journals of prominence at the East In the New York Tribune we find quotations of the flour market in that city which come nearer doing our State justice than is generally done by papers which ought to be fully as well or better acquainted with our products and resources Some twenty four brands of extra are quoted and of these, Oregon is quoted higher than fifteen other brands New York Indiana Ohio and Michigan brands are given $5 40@10 per bbl and ours at $10 12½ California and Oregon brands seem to be held in equal esteem notwithstanding the claim made by the Golden State of the superiority of her product in this line

On the last steamer which sailed from San Francisco for Panama 1,000 barrels of Oregon flour were shipped for New York via the Isthmus We are glad to chronicle these evidences that the products of our State are taking in the appreciation of the public
